

Convening chat on Mattermost

What is Mattermost?

Mattermost is an open source application for team collaboration, similar to Slack, for those of you who have used Slack before. It runs on APC's server, so your conversations are securely stored and data protected. Confidentiality is guaranteed as not even system administrators cannot have access to your private conversations.

How to connect?

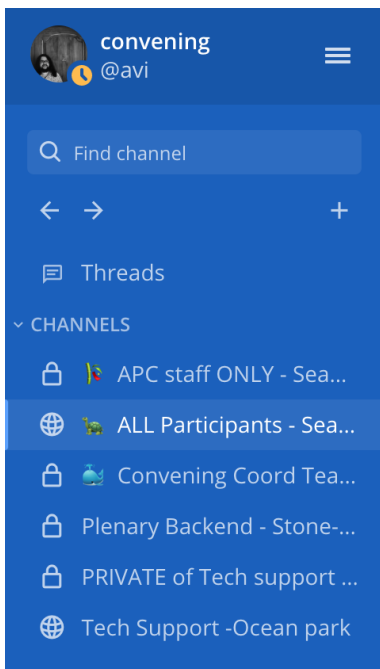

Simply click on <https://mm.apc.org/convening> and enter your username and password - the same one you use at inside.apc.org and convening21.apc.org.

If you have forgotten your username and password, you can reset it using your registered email address at inside.apc.org

To access Mattermost you can also use apps on your phone or desktop. Check available apps at mattermost.com/download/#mattermostApps and use server name mm.apc.org and same credentials when logging in.

You are all part of the 'convening' team on the APC's Mattermost server.

Channels

Once you login you will see channels (and direct messages) in a sidebar on the left.

Use ALL Participants - Sea turtles get updates on sessions and other announcements and to connect with everyone at the convening.

Use Tech Support -Ocean park to ask for help from the tech team on any tech issues you might be having. Someone in the tech team is always monitoring the chat.

Direct messages

Notify users about the message

When you want to reference someone in a conversation use @ followed by their username, ie @shivi. That person will receive a notification and be informed about the conversation they are a part of. This feature is useful in cases when you have direct messages with multiple people but you want a certain person to be notified about the conversation.

@all and @channel notifies everybody in the channel
